LI business presents check to local charity

On a sunny Saturday in March, Don's Hand Car Wash presented a check to The Lung Cancer Society of Long Island. On hand to receive the donation were Meyer Rosen, director of the Lung Cancer Society of Long Island, as well as the organization's president Russell Mirman.

"One dollar from every car wash in November was donated to the cause," says Don's Hand Car Wash owner Alan Fleisher, "this was in memory of my mother Beverly who lost a courageous battle with lung cancer in September of last year at age 84. I'm incredibly moved by the efforts of The Lung Cancer Society of Long Island, and I'm proud to be able to offer this donation in memory of my mom to further the ability to find a cure."

The feelings were mutual from Selma Rosen, 15 year Lung Cancer survivor and Secretary of The Lung Cancer Society of Long Island who in a statement writes, "We are so thankful to Don's Hand Car Wash for this very generous donation. These funds will be directly used to support efforts to find a cure for lung cancer, and to make a difference in the lives of lung cancer patients, survivors and families on Long Island and throughout the country."

Fleisher hopes to continue his efforts in helping the community in the near future, "It's a good feeling when a local business can give back," Fleisher says while surrounded by teams of people focused on cleaning the cars around him, "I would especially like to thank all of our patrons who helped make this possible."
